2022

Annual Report

By the Rockefeller Foundation

Dear Esteemed Donors, Loyal Supporters, and Friends,

2022 has been a remarkable year of growth and impact for the Pratthanadee Foundation. Our good work continues to be recognized across the country by the various schools with which we partner as an integral part of developing and protecting women in the community. Whether it's showing someone how to physically defend themselves, teaching negotiation skills, or helping a young woman understand her legal rights, our programs have never been in more demand. We are deeply humbled by the reputation we have cultivated, cementing our status as one of the foremost programs in the nation dedicated to enhancing the prospects of success in life for underprivileged women.

Importantly, this year also marked a profound transformation for the Pratthanadee Foundation. Thanks to the Algot Enevoldsen Foundation, which made one of the largest donations in our 24-year history, we were able to embark on a comprehensive organizational assessment and formulate a strategic blueprint for the coming years. With their generous support, we are now poised to make vital investments in expanding our team and filling key leadership positions, enabling us to operate with even greater efficacy and extend our reach even further.

Throughout our journey, we have been exceptionally fortunate to have a team of individuals who embody unwavering commitment and tireless dedication. These remarkable individuals have selflessly served our students, going above and beyond the call of duty. While our achievements in 2022 were nothing short of remarkable (we trained over 5,000 young women!), it is important to acknowledge the toll this took on our team. Thanks to the Algot Enevoldsen grant, we are now equipped to confront these challenges head-on.

Excitement and renewed energy are palpable in our office as we embark on the next leg of our journey. With this expansion in size and scale, we aspire to achieve even greater milestones, and our vision for the future shines brighter than ever before.

Please come visit and see us in action in either Bangkok or Ubon Ratchathani. Thank you for your continued support!

Best Regards,
Enrique
Founder

Dear Friends,

It was the best of times and the worst of times, to quote Dickens, looking back at 2022. A corner of the world was sadly mired in military conflict, but we also finally witnessed the thawing of Covid restrictions as the nearly three-year old pandemic started to wane. With more people vaccinated, and many acquiring immunity from infection, the doors to our classes in Bangkok were once again opened. The convivial atmosphere returned much to the delight of our students and volunteers. While we made do with virtual classes during the lockdown, nothing could take the place of a community getting together in the same room, giving each other real hugs and not virtual ones.

In Ubon Ratchathani, where we have had a foothold since 2012, our team was back on the ground training high school girls in under-resourced schools from May to November. We owe a huge debt of gratitude to our donors and partners for their patience. Their understanding allowed us to postpone or redesign projects in the northeastern provinces. As a result, part of our team was based there for nearly six months to clear the backlog of workshops. It was taxing physically and mentally for them, but the ecstatic reaction of the high school students to their return more than made up for any lost sleep.

I made a commitment several years ago that we would look at varying our sources of funding. We made some headway last year as we were in talks with an institution based in Singapore. After over a year of conversations, the Algot Enevoldsen Foundation agreed to provide some funding to us for 2023. Their donation will allow us to flesh out and execute a new strategic plan to scale up for our next stage of growth. We are thankful for their trust in us to deliver positive change in the lives of more underprivileged girls and women. To accomplish this, as always, we will have to rely on the support and generosity of other donors, our partners, volunteers, students and our team in the years to come.

Sincerely yours,

M. R. Benchapa Krairiksh

Introducing Pratthanadee

The Pratthanadee Foundation is a non-governmental organization based in Bangkok, Thailand with a second branch in Ubon Ratchathani province in the northeast of Thailand. Pratthanadee, established in 1999 and officially registered in 2000, is registered under the Office of the National Culture Commission in Thailand (license number: Tor 490/2543 and registry number: Kor Thor 1158) and is affiliated with a partner 501 c(3) tax-exempt organization in the United State.

A young girl growing up in rural Thailand has few opportunities for education, training and employment. As a result, thousands of young women move to Bangkok each year looking for work to support parents, grandparents, younger siblings and sometimes their own children back home.

These women arrive in the city with little preparation, no savings, no connections and no real, marketable skills. Their opportunities in Bangkok are limited – factory work, domestic labor, cleaning and sometimes worse. With stark choices and growing financial pressure, they often become trapped in informal, underpaid or unsafe work. The Pratthanadee Foundation works with these women to improve their economic opportunities and to prevent young girls from falling into the same traps.

Through our volunteers and staff, we provide free training in hard and soft skills so women and girls become more confident, independent, ambitious, and are likely to secure better jobs and higher salaries. Our training is offered in Bangkok and in Ubon Ratchathani and surrounding provinces in the northeast of Thailand. Pratthanadee serves two main groups:

- Women who are unemployed or in employment that is unstable, unsafe or underpaid in Bangkok;
- Girls from poor backgrounds in rural northeast Thailand, who are at a crucial point in making decisions about their futures.

The Foundation launched its unique core training program 'Better Me' in 2016. Our 'Better Me' course comprises a series of weekly workshops, accompanied by 1-on-1 mentoring and English language classes, to help women turn their lives around and achieve their goals. Our training workshops for girls are offered in partnership with local schools and include 'Preparing for Success', a career planning workshop, and 'Claim your Rights', a personal safety workshop. Pratthanadee has a small staff team and group of dedicated volunteers. We create a welcoming community, where women feel supported and valued as they take the first step to a brighter future.

How Pratthanadee Works

We help women in Thailand who are:

- Living a hand-to-mouth existence in low paid, dangerous or demeaning work.
- Undereducated and low skilled, and unsure how to move beyond this.
- Carrying the responsibility of supporting children and family upcountry with very low wages.
- Leading a lifestyle that is damaging their self-confidence, health, and their relationships with children and family.

Our mission is to capture the generosity of donors and volunteers and transform it into free high-quality training and support for underprivileged women, inspiring a new generation of confident, motivated and resilient women.

We aim for Pratthanadee's women to be actively seeking to realize their career and work aspirations by:

- Securing higher quality employment with better working conditions.
- Securing a promotion or a pay rise.
- Taking on further training or education to meet their career goals.

By taking control of their own lives, our women are able to start moving towards independence and financial security, reducing overreliance on unhealthy jobs, relationships and loans.

A Life-Changing Program for Women

In 2016, we launched a new core training program: The 'Better Me' Program.

Women at the Foundation now have access to career and personal development training to help set the right attitude and provide tools for success. Over a series of weekly training, the program guides women from feeling trapped, dependent, and hopeless about the future to becoming empowered, optimistic and motivated, ready to explore new opportunities.

'Better Me' lifts women up. It lets them know that they can be more, and then it provides them with the tools and the support to become more. There is nothing else quite like it in Bangkok. It is built on 15 years of trial and error, and the content rivals many private sector personal development programs.

'Better Me' creates real empowerment: an internal and positive change in each woman, so that she can go out and change her life herself.

The program includes four core elements:

1. Develop Vital Skills: 30 hours of career and personal development training, covering topics such as Self-Assessment, Goal-Setting, Women's Law and Rights, Self-Defense, Managing Your Money and Getting the Right Job for You.
2. Learn Basic English: 25 English lessons, taking students up to Level A1 in the Common European Framework of Reference for Languages, and helping them to access higher levels of employment in Bangkok.
3. Personal Mentoring Sessions: A female mentor with regular one-to-one sessions to provide personal help and support throughout the program.
4. A Welcoming Community: Supportive staff, a computer lounge and library, and a welcoming center in the heart of Bangkok.

Empowering Workshops for Girls

A common solution often proposed to the poverty faced in rural villages across Thailand is to dispatch their children to the city to make money to send home. While the poverty is challenging enough, the male-oriented culture has created an even more unfortunate fate for the women. Often, it is the young female who rescues her family, while men tend to be freer to live their lives.

There is always at least one person in every family, who knows intuitively from an early age that she will become responsible for improving the whole family's life, while the rest of the family lives from her earnings. We work with these young girls before they move to the city, and then direct them to our courses aimed at women in Bangkok if and when they migrate to the capital.

In partnership with local schools, we run two core workshops for girls:

1. Claim Your Rights Training

Moving from a village to the capital city can be a shock, and many of these girls will find themselves in risky work in bars, clubs and private homes. We prepare them by providing training in life-saving skills, including:

- ✓ Recognizing and avoiding dangerous situations.
- ✓ Women's law and rights.
- ✓ Basic self-defense.

2. Preparing for Success Training

When girls leave village schools, they are unlikely to have received any advice on what to do next. This workshop introduces them to:

- ✓ Self-assessment.
- ✓ Training and education options post-school.
- ✓ How to find and apply for jobs.

The Year in Numbers

3,429

Number of at-risk high school girls in Ubon Ratchathani who received self-learning kits on dealing with gender-based violence

4,132

Number of girls in Ubon Ratchathani who were trained in 'Preparing for Success' and 'Claim your Rights' workshops.

36

Number of people whom we counselled on gender-based violence issue (face to face and via social media)

129

Number of women in Bangkok who attended our career and personal development online courses.

48

Number of women in Bangkok who attended our weekly English language online courses.

720

Number of English course hours conducted.

The Year in Review

2022 was a year of two very different halves. We started the first five months with no visibility of whether we could make our way to the northeast of the country. But what a change when the Covid restrictions were lifted. Part of the team ended up in Ubon Ratchathani for six months; the longest we had ever been in the province.

First Half

The Omicron Covid virus disrupted our Bangkok operations for a short while. When the wave of infections from the new variant slowed, we switched to conducting classes both online and offline. The hybrid format was also necessary as some students had left the capital after losing their jobs to the pandemic or they could no longer afford to live in the city. So even though they were back in their home provinces all over the country, they were still keen to attend 'Better Me' lessons. With the support of our volunteer teachers, we kept the virtual classes going. The rest, however, were elated to be back at the foundation, mask on and all, of course.

Our team also kept busy preparing for the eventual lifting of Covid restrictions. We had a backlog of Ubon projects held over from the previous year that we were hopeful could see the light of day in 2022. There were in total 12 projects targeting over 60 schools in the northeast pending. Training materials for these must be ready to go the minute we could travel again. Then there was the regular communications and coordination with our partner schools, crucial to keeping all stakeholders on their toes so that there would be minimal time lag when we eventually activated the projects.

Planning for new projects also occupied our time as the team participated in a number of regionally competitive grant applications and requests for proposal. We bagged the major ones such as Canada Fund For Local Initiatives and Irish Aid for In-Country Micro-Project Scheme. Both had previously supported our work in Ubon.

Second Half

For close to a decade, we had run workshops uninterrupted for teenage girls in poorly resourced schools in the province on life skills, career planning and dealing with gender-based violence. Covid-19 put the brakes on this outreach, albeit temporarily. After having our wings clipped for the last two years by the pandemic, we were exceedingly happy to be back on the road in Ubon by late May. We had quite a backlog of projects, 12 in all, targeting close to 8,000 students.

First off the blocks was a project supported by the Irish Aid In-Country Micro Projects Scheme which we completed by early July. Part of the objectives was to train at least 1,000 high school girls on dealing with domestic and other forms of gender-based violence. We did that over 24 workshops in 11 schools. Punching above our weight, we managed to train 1,134 girls, surpassing our target. We thank the Irish Embassy for their support and patience. The participating schools and students were so pleased with our work that some indicated almost immediately that they wanted us back next year. Hopefully, with more funding and no further lockdowns, we will see them again.

The other projects took us all the way to November to clear, quite a marathon for the team. They were a combination of distributing self-learning kits to students of schools still uneasy with the physical proximity of workshop training, and group training sessions for high school girls. Both focused on rights of women under Thai law and planning for the future beyond high school.

Part of our time was also devoted to a strategic review exercise, moderated by an external consultant, that lasted nearly six months. Sponsored by Algot Enevoldsen Foundation, it was part of the due diligence process required by the donor. We found it to be exceedingly useful and timely as we were ready for a reboot after over two decades of existence. Guided by a fresh pair of eyes, we deconstructed everything we had ever done, went back to the drawing board and drafted a new roadmap for growth. We hope to share the new plans with all stakeholders in the new year.

Notes from Ubon Ratchathani (Ubon)

Our Managing Director, Sarochinee Unyawachsumrith (Beer), shares the highlight of her return to the province after Covid restrictions were lifted.

After Covid kept us away from the province for nearly two years, it was a huge relief to be back in Ubon. A backlog of projects, held over from 2021, awaited us in the northeast. We had usually spent a month or two every summer in this part of country prior to the pandemic. But 2022 was by far the longest we had ever been based there. With back-to-back donor-funded projects to clear at over 60 high schools, we soon lost track of time until the weather turned cool and we realized we had been there from summer to early winter!

The hectic itinerary aside, the biggest excitement for me was not the return to Ubon after an involuntary hiatus but a new project funded by the Canadian Embassy. On the ground in the province for over a decade, we have trained over 30,000 high school girls in the northeast on dealing with gender-based violence and abuse, and planning for their future. But this project funded by the Canada Fund for Local Initiatives is truly the most impactful we have done. 'Rewiring Gender Perception' was a decade in the making, in a way. This project involved equipping teachers with a teaching manual on gender equality and giving students learning kits to complement the teachers' instructions. Ten schools and 1,000 students are participating in this pilot project in Ubon and neighbouring Amnat Charoen. Had we not sunk roots in northeast Thailand over 10 years ago and develop relationships with schools, district officials and the education ministry's regional office there, this would not have been possible. With this project, we can mainstream gender inclusivity education in select high schools to support their curriculum. Our impact will be amplified as subsequent batches of students beyond the current ones will be instructed on gender equality in class.

"Our impact will be amplified as subsequent batches of students beyond the current ones will be instructed on gender equality in class."

Putting the whole thing together was not smooth sailing. Countless meetings were held with all levels of stakeholders to persuade them to come on board with us. It was challenging convincing schools to carve out part of their curriculum to teach gender equality and promote a gender-sensitive learning environment; especially so in Thailand. Not one to give up easily, my team and I pushed on gently until we detected a warming in the tone of every conversation we had. With this, we knew we had them on board. One by one we did this until we had gathered 10 schools, over 1,000 students, and roped in the education ministry's regional office to be part of this project. As a show of commitment and solidarity, the key stakeholders came together and put their signatures to memoranda of understanding at a formal event in November, witnessed by Shawn Tinkler, First Secretary, Embassy of Canada to Thailand. It was a very satisfying moment for us.

At the end of the year, 'Rewiring Gender Perception' kicked off with a review on the state of gender-based violence and abuse in under-resourced schools and homes via a survey involving interviews and data collection. The findings were used to design the teacher's manual and the accompanying student's learning kit. Both will be handed over to the participating schools in the new year. I hope to share the outcome plus the progress of the project with you in 2023.

Meet our Student

Kanokon Matchimo (Riang)

Since failing to make it to university after high school and moving to Bangkok for work in 1995, Riang has experienced divorce twice, become a single mother, and shuffled through a range of jobs, most of which she did not like. Now a janitor at an international school, she is finally enjoying some respite from her eventful past albeit she has never harbored negativity over everything that has happened to her.

Still, life could be better, Riang felt and signed up to be a student at Prathanadee some two years back. “My friend Preaw was a student and spoke English fluently, I was inspired and so decided to enrol but found out that the foundation also has a ‘Better Me’ program for those who wanted to manage their lives to better.”

The course has taught her how to plan her future, manage her money, and handle her emotions when she faces difficult circumstances. She now knows how to negotiate with her employer to protect her rights, defend herself in dangerous situations, and has even become more adept at socializing. The latter used to be difficult for the 45-year old native of Kalasin province because of a mild hearing impairment.

“The ear problem started quite a number of years ago and it badly affected my confidence. I was upfront when I applied to be a student but the staff told me it was not a problem.” Riang said the course has helped open her up to people and opportunities. “Everyone accepted me in class when I started. I no longer ‘block out’ myself because of this health issue.” Happier and more self-assured now, Riang is planning for the next stage of her life. “I want to return to my home province and start a clothing store. My daughter’s agreed to fund my new business. I’ll also have more time with my children.”

helped me to improve myself a lot. I've more confidence now, know how to control my feelings, and know about managing my money. Life's getting better."

Mai sees herself working another eight years or so before she returns to her hometown to fulfil her dream. "I'll help my family start an avocado and rice farm. But I'll also study for a certificate to be a Shan language teacher." Spoken widely in her village, she wants to teach children to read and write. "I also want to teach them what I've learnt at Pratthanadee so they can plan their future and manage their lives better. I don't want them to drop out of school like me or end up married and pregnant at a young age."

She hopes to be a teacher one day, but when Mai was growing up in Myanmar her family had a different life path for her. Attaining educational qualifications was not important they felt. They wanted her to be a farmer. Mai's time in school would often get interrupted up to a month at a time as they needed an extra pair of hands to help out during harvest season. At odds with their expectations and estranged from her father, she ran away to Bangkok when she was only 14.

Life was anything but sweet when Mai arrived in the Big Mango in 2014. Her first job was a live-in housekeeper for a family and their five dogs. It was a tall order for the petite teenage farm girl from Myanmar. After two years of living under constant threats of pay cuts from her aggressive bosses, she left to work in a factory. It did not last long as she was allergic to the chemicals used at the industrial design plant. Mai then found a job looking after three toddlers in addition to housekeeping. Two years later, she had to job hunt again as the children became older so the family no longer needed her. That led Mai to her current work as a domestic helper in a more congenial work environment.

"This is the job that I love the most. I like cooking and my boss is very kind and always encourages me when I do something well." At peace with her new workplace, Mai was able to think about her future and on a recommendation from a friend, started attending classes at Pratthanadee. "Studying here has

Meet our Partner

Songyut Damthong, Director, Warin Chamrap School

Pratthanadee has run workshops at your school for a number of years, how would you rate the training?

We've collaborated for over seven years and I find the team from Pratthanadee to be very committed to their mission. The foundation's uncovered some problems our students face and provided training to help them deal with these issues. These teenagers are mostly from troubled families. We appreciate an extra pair of eyes to tell us the blind spots that we sometimes miss.

What impact has the training had on your students?

I was very impressed with the 'Rewiring Gender Perception' training. Unlike before where only girls participated, this workshop involved boys as well which makes the training more complete. Some of the boys encounter same gender-based problems as the girls. This training will have a positive impact on youth development and on the country also. We thank Pratthanadee Foundation and the Embassy of Canada for recognizing the issues and supporting the school.

What else can we do better?

My only suggestion is for the foundation to provide us a report after every training to let us know areas we can improve on. From it, my teachers and I can better understand the problems our students face and reflect on our shortcomings to see how we can fix some of them. It'll be better for the students.

Meet our Partner

Dolaya Tarasri, Teacher, Samrongwittayakarn School

“Our students have benefited directly from the training and they’ve also taken the new knowledge and skills back home and share them with families and friends.”

Pratthanadee has run workshops at your school for a number of years, how would you rate the training?

I’m very impressed with the Pratthanadee staff. They’re capable and organise and conduct the workshops well. The training is enjoyable and our students are always very happy to attend them. It’s been very beneficial for our students and they’ve gained useful knowledge that can be applied in daily life.

What impact has the training had on your students?

Our students have benefited directly from the training and they’ve also taken the new knowledge and skills back home and share them with families and friends. So I would say, it’s also impacted the wider communities that our students come from.

What else can we do better?

The recent ‘Rewiring Gender Perception’ workshop that was conducted in our school was excellent. It opened up training to students of every gender. This will help expand Pratthanadee’s target group and impact more students. Also, the student’s self-learning kit and teacher’s manual from this project can be used over and over again, so future batches of students will benefit. I look forward to more of such training and we’re always ready to welcome the team from the foundation. You know, my students always ask me, “When’s the next Pratthanadee workshop?” They really like it.
